During this first hour, daylight will still appear bright and if you had not known of the coming eclipse, you might not have noticed anything amiss. But look at shadows cast on the ground from leaves of trees. You'll see an amazing collection of crescents that is the tell: an eclipse is in progress. 10-15 minutes before totality. Although the eclipse has been in progress for about an hour so far, there have yet been no obvious signs of what is about to come. But this will change quickly.
